To my many friends, family and supporters,

More and more I realize that life is a blessed gift from God. I accept each of life's challenges with that understanding and seek the blessings of God in each turn of events. My relationship with my Creator has made me more secure in myself and more understanding as well as sympathetic to the plights of others. It has made me more confident that God's Power is the balance needed in every situation.

A good God and good people are a wonderful combination to overcome any struggle that life places before us. I am a witness that such a combination is unbeatable! It has allowed me to overcome various obstacles in my life to achieve many of my personal and professional goals. I have a wonderful and devoted husband, a beautiful daughter, a great son and daughter-in-law, two (2) precious granddaughters, a loving mother who has always been by my side as my greatest supporter along with compassionate family members and cherished friends. My professional goals achieved as a writer also serve as a testimony.

Recently, I have been given another challenge to face, which in many instances is perhaps one of my greatest. I was recently diagnosed with a neurological condition of the brain that will require my full attention for recovery and complete healing. The prognosis is good and very hopeful. My physician, in whom I am confident, believes that with proper care and treatment there is every reason to believe that I will recover and get back to my normal schedule of activities. During my recovery, however, I will continue to engage in my greatest passion, writing. I will have a lot to write about.

With God and the continued support and love of my family and close friends, I am being restored to good health. I desire your fervent prayers and well wishes for my comfort and healing along with strength for my husband and my family as we travel this challenging faith journey together.

You are welcomed to join me and to believe in God for whatever you may need in your life. I certainly will.

To God Be the Glory!!!
